COMMUNICATIONS COMMITTEE BULLETIN
April 29, 2013

As you may remember, we suspended this bulletin for the last two weeks, with plans for the Communications Committee to meet less often than once a week.

At this time, we've decided to suspend the Communications Committee and this bulletin indefinitely. We will always have the option of reconvening if circumstances call for it, but for now, there simply isn't restructuring-related information worth reporting.

There's obviously still a lot going on at Free Geek! However, the job of communicating these happenings is in the hands of other people as part of their everyday duties. Improving communication with our volunteers, for example, continues to be one of our top priorities. This communication will happen formally through the efforts of the Public Services department, but we also want to work to make sure that all Free Geek staff are empowered to informally answer any questions volunteers in their areas may have.

It's been a great six months being your Official Voice Of Change. It is with some relief that we note the pace of change has slowed to the point where that official voice isn't really needed. Thanks for all your patience and attention, and as always, thanks for everything you do for Free Geek!

Sincerely,
Your Communications Committee
